PART 02

Group plan

execution timeline

Preliminary preparation

Divide the structure, categorize the titles and abstracts, ask questions about them and read through the text to see if you can pick out the key words.

Execution period

Look at the form and style of the references and in-text citations, explore the scope of application of this format, and read the article in depth to find the title and abstract in relation to the article.

Late response

Evaluate the effectiveness, make suggestions for optimization, apply the theory to the analysis of the actual article, and see if there are any analysis holes.

PART 03

RESEARCH QUESTIONS

- What are the form-based features and styles of citations of journal and magazine respectively?
- What are the typical formal patterns and focus of titles and abstract of journal and magazine and how they relates to the passage?
- Are there any similarities and differences between them?
- What do these similarities and differences suggest?

RESEARCH METHODS

- 1) create corpus: titles, abstract, citations
- 2) Identify and categorize three types of abstracts (descriptive, informative and critical) and detect relationships between abstract and passage.
- 3) Identify and Analyze forms of citations :
In-text citations: Categorizing citations into direct and indirect, and analyze their differences qualitatively.
reference list: Analyze the references ("APA", "MLA" or "Chicago") ("Journal" or "magazine"..) and notes qualitatively.

The background features a light cream color with abstract red elements. In the top-left corner, a circular shape is filled with diagonal red lines. In the top-right corner, a solid red circle is partially visible. A series of thin, wavy red lines curves across the top of the page. In the bottom-left corner, another solid red circle is partially visible, and a series of thin, wavy red lines curves across the bottom. In the bottom-right corner, a circular shape is filled with diagonal red lines. Two small, solid red circles are positioned in the middle-left and middle-right areas of the page.
